

You just gave a short speech about U.S./Chinese relations at a banquet in China and you threw in a sweet song to finish it off. Great move! Go directly to the Asian Cultural Pavilion or the Cultural Pavilion of your choice.

One of the biggest faux pas in Japan is touching someone in public. You greet your Japanese business partner with a handshake, a big smile and a slap on the back. Go back to Start.

While ordering food at a French bistro, you ask in French for a café au lait "s'il vous plat". Go to the Cultural Pavilion of your choice for scoring big points with the French.

Wild Card

Wild Card

Wild Card

The worst heat wave in decades spreads across Italy. The power goes out at the train station and you miss your meeting. Lose a turn.

As a gesture of appreciation, you give your Argentinean business associate a bottle of fine French bubbly. Celebrate by moving to the Cultural Pavilion of your choice.

You get caught in the crossfire of a political uprising in Venezuela. While having a drink at the bar, you get a dirty look from the locals when you bring it up to the bartender. Go back to start.

Wild Card

Wild Card

Wild Card

You know from an experience with your Middle Eastern neighbors that it's downright rude to show the soles of your shoes. Go directly to the Middle Eastern Cultural Pavilion and kick up your feet at a belly dancing show.

Your new Saudi Arabian friend invites you over to meet the family. You walk right in without the customary "Tafaddal" and hand gesture, meaning "come on in". Go back to start.

While having a quick bite to eat at Rubios Restaurant in Southern California, you offer to pick up the tab. Travel 3 spaces and roll the dice again.

Wild Card

Wild Card

Wild Card

Satisfied with your meal, you let out a loud belch while dining at one of America's finest steakhouses. While it may be cool in some countries, your American counterparts are admonished by your inappropriate action. Go back to start.

Wild Card

